A Holophone system was supplied under licence, as a permanent installation, to the Moscow International Music House.
On December 26, 2002 the gala opening ceremony of the Moscow International House of Music took place.
The new unique concert complex is the first "Palace of Music" built in Russia within more than 100 years.
The complex was constructed on the initiative of the City Mayor Mr. Yuri M. Luzhkov, as well as of the Moscow City Government. In return, the Moscow House of Music is to increase the prestige of Moscow as one of the world's cultural centers.
The Moscow House of Music comprises a symphony hall with more than 1800 seats, a chamber hall and...
Seventeen Steinway grand-pianos have already been purchased for the Moscow House of Music, and by 2004, the largest wind ensemble in the country, the Moscow State Academic Symphony Orchestra, will perform in the newly built auditorium, accompanying symphonic, chamber, and choral works.
The audio-video studio with super modern technical equipment will enable the Moscow House of Music to record not only concerts and music shows but also film and television projects, performances by famous artists, and special events, including corporate events, seminars, conferences, and training seminars. The studio will be a unique space for hosting various cultural and social events, such as art exhibitions, auctions, and lectures. Additionally, the studio can be used for recording music videos, documentaries, and other audio-visual projects. The versatile facilities of the studio will meet the needs of a wide range of clients and provide a high level of professional services.
